ERGONOMICS: COMMON SENSE? NONSENSE? BUSINESS CENTS?

R.J. Banks, MS, CIE

State Compensation Insurance Fund

Many people think that ergonomics is not supported by science, that it's too time-consuming to implement, and that results do not justify the expense. R.J. Banks, State Fund's Senior Ergonomist, will attempt to dispel those myths with case studies, simple solutions, and compelling reasons why developing a participatory approach, based on everyday problem solving techniques works. This session will prove to be interactive with some valuable take-home materials.

R.J. Banks, MS, CIE

State Compensation Insurance Fund

R.J. Banks is a Senior Ergonomics Consultant and Supervisor of the Ergonomics Services unit of State Compensation Insurance Fund. Her ergonomics expertise earned her the 2005 "Employee Safety Award" from Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger. R.J. received her Bachelor of Science from California State Polytechnic University, Pomona and Master of Science from California State University, Fullerton.

SAFETY BASICS IN THE WORKPLACE

Mark Aniello, REA

ECR, Inc, President and CEO

You will learn the use and benefits of safety management systems. These are systems organized and structured to ensure business is capable of achieving and maintaining a high standard of safety performance. Integrating safety into management and work practices will result in accident reduction and increased productivity. Discussed will be several safety management systems currently recognized, including OHSAS 18001, National Safety Council, and American National Standards Institute (ANSI).
